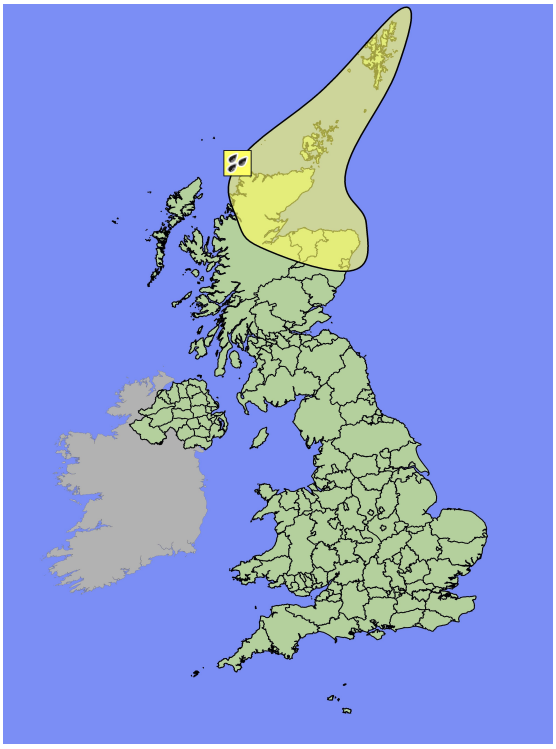
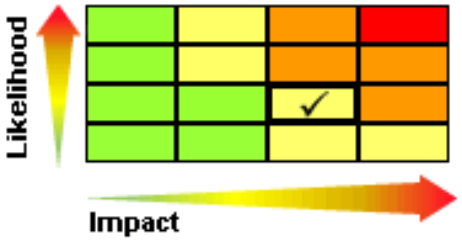
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Rainfall accumulations are expected to reach 30 to 50mm quite widely with as much as 100mm possible in places. However there remains some uncertainty in the timing of the onset of the persistent heavy rain and its southward extent across northern Scotland.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Rain

Valid from 00:00 on Sat, 27th Aug 2011 until 23:59 on Sun, 28th Aug 2011

A spell of wet and unseasonably windy weather is expected through this weekend. Persistent rain, heavy at times, is expected, accompanied by strong to gale force winds with a risk of severe gales in the most exposed areas. The public should be aware of the risk of localised flooding.
